

Canstruction® Nova Scotia Call for Entries

Feeding hungry families

Thousands of Nova Scotians face the harsh realities of hunger each month. Children, mothers, fathers, grandparents—hunger knows no barriers and its impact is truly profound. The good news is you can help make a difference through an amazing event called Canstruction® Nova Scotia.

An amazing event

Canstruction® Nova Scotia is a dynamic design competition that showcases our province's abundant talent and creative power, with an added benefit of helping to feed hungry families.

Teams come together from many industries and communities to build unique structures out of canned food. When it's over, the food is donated to Feed Nova Scotia for distribution to 146 member agency food banks and meal programs throughout the province. Last year the event raised over 16,000 cans of food valued at over $26,000. With your help, we're hoping to do even better this year.

There's no denying Canstruction® Nova Scotia supports a worthy cause, and being part of that feels great, but there's an added bonus to the event too—bragging rights are clearly at stake!

After being judged by a panel of community leaders and industry professionals, the winners go on to an international competition, where they compete with the best structures from across North America.

Award categories

A jury of professionals will select winning entries in the following categories: Best Original Design, Best Meal, Best Use of Labels, Structural Integrity and Most Cans. As well, a People's Choice Award will be chosen by the public.

Who can enter?

Any group or organization can take part! Each team must include an architect, engineer, designer or construction professional. Volunteer mentors are available from these industries to support your team.

If entering a team isn't for you this year, consider supporting the event in other ways. For details, visit feednovascotia.ca/canstruction or contact Jan Hall at (902) 457-1900 ext. 233 or jhawkes@feednovascotia.ca.
