Hunters Helping the Hungry is a joint initiative of the hunting community and Feed Nova Scotia, whereby hunters can donate a portion of their deer/moose or bear meat to help feed families who access food banks for support.

The Nova Scotia Federation of Anglers & Hunters continues to support the program, and this year they have organized a draw for a chance to win a Remington shotgun, donated by Remington Arms. Every hunter making a donation will receive a ballot, and one ballot will be drawn at annual general meeting of the Federation of Anglers and Hunters, held in March each year. Ballots and details are available at each of the licensed meat cutter locations. Please refer to the poster outlining details.

Thank you to the hunters who supported this program in the past. In 2016, hunters donated 546 kilograms, the Aboriginal community donated 90 kilograms from the moose hunt, and Feed Nova Scotia accepted 164 kilograms of bear meat donations, for a total of 970 kilograms. That's an incredible 9,700 servings of much-needed protein for Nova Scotians in need.

How does the program work?

1. Hunter registers deer/bear/moose
2. Hunter takes deer/bear/moose to a licensed participating meat cutter

Important: ballots missing the wildlife resource number will be disqualified.
4. Feed Nova Scotia picks up donations and ballots from licensed meat cutters.
5. The draw will take place during the Federation of Anglers & Hunters Annual Award Dinner March 2018.

Note: Processing is at hunter's expense.

How can I get involved?

How much can I donate?
